CHRISTENS BATTLESHIP

MISS MARY BENTON, charming Western girl, of Fargo, N. D., who broke bottle of wine on bows of great battleship launched after her State.

MONSTER VESSEL SENT DOWN WAYS

Great Battleship North Dakota Successfully Launched at Quincy, Mass.

MISS BENTON IS SPONSOR Distinguished Party Witnesses Plunge of This Country's First Dreadnought.

QUINCY, MASS., November 10.—The most powerful addition which the navy of the United States has ever received, and America's first all-around, big-gun battleship, the North Dakota, was successfully launched to-day from the yard of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company.

With the foam of the christening wine streaming down her bow plates from the bottle smashed by Miss Mary Benton, of Fargo, N. D., and under the watchful eye of Governor John Burke, of the State for which she is named, the North Dakota floated off into the basin about 60 per cent completed. Some time next summer she will be turned over to the government for acceptance, and if she fulfils the test will go into commission next September.

Marks New Epoch.
The North Dakota is looked upon by naval experts as establishing a new epoch in battleship construction.

A distinguished gathering of officials of North Dakota, together with several representatives of the State of Massachusetts, naval officials and three foreign naval attaches, saw the launching. As the noon whistles blew in the yard the spectators began to knock away the supports. At 12:27 the launch was cut, giving the vessel motion. At that moment a belated bottle of champagne was swung by Miss Benton against the bow, and she said: "Christen this North Dakota."

While the vessel rested on the ways she was critically inspected by the government officials, who looked her lines over.

After the launching the invited guests and the great crowd of on-lookers, who had gathered in front of the company, were served. Felicitous speeches were made by Rear-Admiral Bowles and Governor Burke.

Before the conclusion of the thirty-four and a half minutes followed by the government for the delivery of the vessel the hull launched to-day will present a different aspect. By that time ten twelve-inch breech-loading, long-range rifles will have been placed in position, as well as four ten-inch, rapid-fire guns, four three-pound and a like number of one-pound, semi-automatic guns; two three-inch field-pieces, two machine guns of thirty-caliber, and twenty-one-inch submerged torpedo tubes. This constitutes the active armament of the battleship. Protective armor to the extent of about eight inches will cover practically every available spot which might be reached by an enemy's guns, and as a result of the recent naval conference many minor details of additional protection will also be added.

Her Dimensions.
When placed in commission the North Dakota will be 510 feet long on the load-water line, with a breadth of eighty-five feet two and five-eighths inches at the same point. The length over all will be about 518 feet nine inches. The battleship will have a displacement of 20,000 tons, 2,000 in excess of the original British Dreadnought.

It is estimated that a speed of more than 21 knots will be attained on her trials, and that the battleship's horse power will exceed 25,000. The sister ship, the Delaware, now under construction at Newport News, Va., the North Dakota will be fitted with Curtis turbine engines. Including officers, the crew will number more than 500 men. It is estimated that when formally taken over by the government the North Dakota will have cost at least $7,000,000, the contract price of her hull and machinery alone being $4,377,000.

British Still Lead.
Although the American battleship construction record is broken by the North Dakota's hullers, it does not closely approach that held by the British navy in the construction of the first Dreadnought. The keel of that vessel was laid in July, 1905, and on October 24, of the same year, the vessel was launched, and exactly a year later, the ship had its standard commission. It is expected that the North Dakota will be ready for its first trial trip about the latter part of August, 1910, although the actual placing of the battleship into commission may be delayed.

To Captain Charles J. Badger, U. S. N., recently superintendent of the Naval Academy, at Annapolis, will go the honor of being the first commanding officer of the premier "Dreadnought" of the United States Navy.
